Remarks

I had an interview today with claimant during which he informed me that he was called upon by the War office to resign his Commission, because of his having outstay his leave of absence during the period of the Rebellion in the interim which transpired until the decision of the War office was made known to him.

That, in its entirety, cost £50, but at the time of its destruction was not separate with the original articles, it having been some two years in use.

Claimants contend that an officer's kit, which is supplemented by a month's pay in advance, is in the nature of a gift, and is looked upon as forming part of the remuneration which falls to the lot of an officer.

With regard to Claimant's loss, under the head of Personal Effects, I estimate it works out at £11.16.6, and if the two amounts be taken collectively, I consider that compensation on this basis would be fair and reasonable.

Dear Mr Ingoldby

A camp kit wth valise, sleeping bag, washing & bath stand, bucket & bed cost £7-10-0. new. I owe to Conway & Swan of Lane Street alone £18-10-6<sup>18</sup> for the new kit which I was obliged to buy on the destruction of the old one not to mention other tailors & breech makers. I also I find have lost one pair brown shoes which I have not told you of costing £1-15 in Mansfield they were absolutely new. of course those things with exception of shoes etc are useless to me now as I am out of the army. Please do all you can for me as I am very hard up at present.

Yrs very sincerely
Paul. J. Fagan
